

Lesson 13 Summary

- ♣ The criteria for evaluating Internet resources include authorship, content, copyright information, navigation, and quality control.
- ♣ There are various types of Internet resources including electronic journals, magazines, newspapers, Web sites, and e-mail messages.
- ♣ Internet publications and Web site content can claim the same legal protection as books, newspapers, CDs, movies, and other forms that are protected by copyright law.
- ♣ It is very important to cite any information that you use from the Internet. The MLA style is widely used for citing electronic resources.